

The Little Seed

A little seed slept in the dark soil.

It was small and quiet.

One morning, the warm sun came out.

The rain fell softly on the ground.

Drip, drip, drip!

The little seed drank the water.

Soon, a tiny root grew down into the soil.

A little green stem pushed up toward the sun.

"Hello, sunshine!" said the little plant.

Every day, the plant grew taller.

It had two small leaves.

Then it had four leaves.

The sun gave it light.

The rain gave it water.

The soil gave it food.

One day, a small yellow flower appeared.

A bee flew over to visit.

"Buzz, buzz!" said the bee.

The little seed was not a seed anymore.

It had grown into a beautiful flower.

And inside the flower were new seeds, ready to begin again.
